Crochet projects for cotton yarn. How to make a 3d sheep with cotton balls.

Our cotton ball sheep craft is perfect for spring and Easter, is so easy to make and using our free printable template means you'll end up with an adorable sheep with minimal preparation. Making a fuzzy sheep craft is a bit of a classic activity for kids and for little ones who aren't ready to be cutting out tricky face and ear shapes this activity makes it easier for them to join in the fun. This is great alongside some of our other spring animal or farm crafts or just as a quick craft that you can do together. RELATED POSTS: Sheep Crafts for Kids Cotton Ball Sheep Template I've made this craft using our free sheep template. There are two different designs, one that shows the sheep's eyes, nose and mouth and one that leaves these blank so that you can add the sheep's features yourself. You can print as many copies of the template as you like so it's good if you're doing this activity with a group. Materials Needed Sheep template Glue Coloring pencils What Should I Print My Sheep Template On? For this craft I would recommend that you print your template onto cardstock rather than paper if possible. This is because the glue can make the paper quite saturated and also because the cotton balls can weigh a bit - you don't want your craft tearing! I've printed mine onto white cardstock but if you prefer you could print it onto colored card, just obviously be mindful that this will also be the color of your sheep's face. It's fine if you print it onto a pale green and plan to color your sheep's face black or brown, in fact I think that would look great, but it's less likely to work if you print it onto a strong or bright color and want your sheep to have a white face because generally white crayons and coloring pencils don't give the coverage I'd normally like them to. If you know of a brand that works well let me know! Step One Print out your sheep template. I've used white cardstock for mine. Step Two Color in your sheep. I've left one of my sheep blank and colored in the sheep's face and legs on the other sheep. You could also color in the sheep's nose if you wanted too. Because I'm using black I've used a coloring pencil because I wanted to make sure that you could still see the sheep's features but if you choose to use another color then you could use a marker pen instead. Step Three Cover the sheep's body and the top of the sheep's head in glue. I've used school glue / PVA for this because I tend to find that it sticks things with a bit of texture much better than a glue stick. You could use a glue spreader to make sure this covers the sheep's wool if you like. Step Four Glue your cotton balls onto your sheep. You can do these whole or unravel your cotton balls and spread them around the body of the sheep. More Spring Animal Crafts for Kids We have lots of spring crafts and lots of these are perfect as an Easter craft too. This easy chick craft is one that I made with my daughter when she was a preschooler as the big painting material was perfect for her small hands, older kids could also make this as they will be able to do the cutting themselves. This paper plate rabbit is a good one for kids who are learning to use scissors as they can cut out the spiral shape. You can use it as a decoration but it's also fun to play with as it can 'bounce' around the room. Finally this paper plate bee craft uses torn black construction paper and used newspaper to make this cute craft. You could swap the newspaper for white paper though if that's what you have at home. This week we made two different cotton ball sheep crafts! Cotton balls are one of my favorite craft supplies. I love using cotton balls for our kids' crafts and other easy kids activities. They're cheap, plentiful, and easy to find at the grocery store. I even made a whole post on activities you can do featuring cotton balls! We always have cotton balls ready for crafts and activities. And occasionally I'll use them to remove my nail polish ☺ I get that you need to keep your kids busy because you feel stressed about all the stuff you need to get done today. That's why my mission is to...1. Find fun, quality kids' activities and show you step by step how to do them. 2. Save you time and energy by using supplies from around the house or show you where to easily get them.3. Inspire you to be creative and play with your kids in new and exciting ways. How We Did It Cotton Ball Sheep Crafts for Kids I'm going to show you two different sheep crafts using cotton balls. One is a 2D sheep and one is 3D! Mind-blowing, I know. The 2D Sheep To make this cutie, we used white paper, black construction paper, glue sticks, googly eyes, and cotton balls. First, I drew a cloud sheep body on the white paper with a marker. Then Ella, my two-year-old, glued cotton balls to the sheep's body. I drew a large oval and two smaller ovals on black construction paper and cut them out. Ella and I worked together to glue the googly eyes and ears onto the larger oval to form the sheep's face. Ella glued the completed face onto the sheep's body, and I drew a little smile on the sheep with a silver permanent marker. The 3D Sheep To make this 3D sheep craft, we used the same materials as the 2D sheep craft and added a toilet paper tube and some pipe cleaners. I covered the toilet paper tube with white paper so that the sheep would look white even if it wasn't completely covered in cotton balls. Instead of cutting off the ends, I tucked them into the tube so that we could glue the sheep's butt and face together more easily. Then I made a couple holes on one side of the toilet paper roll and stuck short, bent pipe cleaners in to form the sheep's legs. Ella got her trusty glue stick out and glued cotton balls all over the sheep. We used white glue on the ends of the toilet paper roll and stuffed cotton balls in there to finish the sheep's body. Finally, we assembled the head and glued it on. Make sure the head is the same size as or just a bit bigger than the toilet paper roll opening. Cotton balls are so perfect for sheep crafts! I'm a huge fan of simple yet flexible crafts and activities for young children! Cotton balls, glue, and paper are three things that I find endless use for in my home, especially in combination with one another. This cotton ball craft is super easy to modify and use for a variety of ages. Here are some ways to do the activity in your home! Cotton Ball Sheep Crafts for Kids of All Ages You'll want to either trace a sheep shape, or download one of my templates (they are free and available for immediate download... no strings attached!). You can use these as coloring pages as well as for the cotton ball sheep crafts described below. Other materials you'll need: Cotton BallsCraft GlueOptional: Large handled paint brush, hot glue (gun and sticks), laminator, popsicle sticks, glitter, googly eyes, crayons, scissors, markers, colored pencils, food dye, water colors, pastels, chalk, ribbon, other craft supplies. Toddlers are just developing fine motor abilities, and this activity is a great way to help build them! Allow your child to paint glue onto the stencil, pick up cotton balls and place them within the lines of the sheep. Have your child color the sheep's face, then use glue to apply the cotton balls. Once done, help your child cut out the sheep. Start by decorating the sheep's face; color, paint, or use another medium to give it some color. Then, laminate the entire paper. Once the paper has set, heat up a hot glue gun. If your child is super cautious, you may choose to have them help with the glue, but you will probably want to be the one using the glue to help avoid burns. Apply small dots of glue onto the sheep's body, then add cotton balls (they can be pulled a bit to make a more woolen texture, or applied as is). Have your child cut out the sheep once dry/cool. Using the hot glue to glue, apply two popsicle sticks in a cross shape to the back of the sheep. Then, glue two more popsicle sticks together, one on top of the other. Apply those to the bottom back of the sheep, sticking out towards the bottom. Now you have a sheep puppet or planter decoration! Want to dress up the sheep more? You can use food coloring or water colors to dye to cotton balls for a rainbow sheep, apply glitter using regular craft glue, add googly eyes, and more! Your imagination is the only limit!
